CAMBRIANS HEAR WELSH MELODY

William ApMadoc Tells of Keltic Bards of Old and Today.

LAUDS TABERNACLE CHOIR

BARRATT HALL CROWDED TO Montie B. Gwinn Views the HEAR LECTURE.

The charm and beauty of the Welsh language and its adaptability for poetic and musical use were demonstrated at Barratt hall last night before an audience that filled every nook and cranny in the building, when William ApMadoc of Chicago delivered his lecture on "Cambrian Bards of Old and Today."

The lecture was given under the auspices of the Utah Cambrian society, and former Governor Arthur L. Thomas pre-sided. The first number was a magnificent rendition of "Glory and Love to the men of Old," from Gounod's "Faust," after which Governor Thomas introduced Governor Thomas R. Cutler.

Governor Cutler, in a delightful speech, told of the Keltic traits of character, and introduced Mr. ApMadoc.

The bards and sincere of the first con-

The bards and singers of the first century of the present era were first dealt with by the speaker, and the celebrated Welsh melody, "Ar Hyd Y Nos" ("All Through the Night") was sung by the Tabernacle choir. The audience joined in the refrain. This melody was written probably in the tenth century.

Literature and Song.

The second part of the lecture concerned Cambrian literature and song. A number of the leading poets and scholars of Wales were discussed by the speaker, and the nature of their work was explained in a most interesting manner. The choir sang "The March of the Men of Harlech." which was written in 1636 by the court bard of Prince David Ap Elnion, the hero of the great siege.

The story of the melody was told by Mr. ApMadoc, and this suggested another melody, and "The Battle of Gogerddan," the most famous ballad of The second part of the lecture concerned

His work was compared with that of John Ceiriog Hughes, who is termed by the Welsh as the Welsh Robert Burns. The duties of Cambrian societies in the United States was then taken up. The speaker declared with emphasis that every man and woman of Welsh birth or parent-age owed a duty to the world to perpet-uate Welsh tradition and song. Classes should be formed wherever a few Welsh people could gather together, to study the history, traditions and literature of the the speaker said, would be neces-

At the conclusion of the lecture Gover-nor Cutler called for a vote of thanks to the speaker. Mr. ApMadoc interrupted, and said that he would accept the vote of thanks on the condition that the choir and audience would sing the Welsh national anthem, and then "America."

Assessment No. 2.

Pays well in the end. It is the true secret of accumulation. A deposit of only is $10 a month with 4 per cent interest computed semi-annually in five years will yield $64.00, while in ten years you would have $1.47.60. Larger deposits make greater earnings.

We extend to our patrons every courtesy and accommodation in our power consistent with good banking.
